Here at RedEye, we enjoy making life easier for our readers. And when it comes to helping you find gainful employment, we're all business. The best part? People actually are finding jobs with our help. Learn about our project and how to live cheaply at redeyechicago.com/brokeass.

Nadia Larissa Trousdale

Age: 23 Neighborhood: Andersonville
Industry: Writing/editing/social media

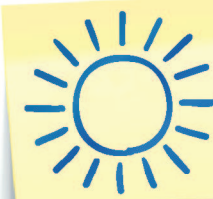

What's your dream job? I love words. I'm happy doing anything with words. I'm a published poet and freelancer, but I'd love to find something a little more steady, with either editing or social media, where I can work with others toward a common goal.

Describe your job hunt in six words or fewer. "If at first you don't succeed ..."

What's your top tip for living cheaply in Chicago? Learn to love the thrift store! You can find some really amazing items on the cheap. Also, be sure to avail yourself of the many free summertime events that can be found in Chicago.

Why should hiring managers give you a call? Not only do I have experience with writing, editing, copywriting and Web design, but I type over 100 words per minute and am familiar with most Windows, Mac and Linux programs. I also have a bit of experience working with numbers, so if you need a writer who's willing and able to help with other clerical tasks, I'm your girl!

Small changes can be a big help to the Earth

L.A. Times

LOS ANGELES So you're a renter and you want to green your space, but your landlord won't splurge on solar panels.

Don't fret. There are plenty of low-cost ways for apartment dwellers to be eco-friendly. You can be a green tenant by unplugging appliances or using chemical-free products. It's as easy as fixing leaky faucets or installing window treatments to conserve heat in the winter and to keep your place cool in the summer without cranking up the air conditioning.

There's a myth that there isn't a lot that renters can do, said Paula Cino, director of Energy and Environmental Policy with the National Multi Housing Council. "Our individual behavior has a huge impact on sustainability. The resident has a lot of opportunity to make big differences themselves without any input from the landlord whatsoever."

Recycling

Americans are consumers to the core, rapidly accumulating and discarding belongings that gobble up energy as they're manufactured, delivered and then eventually dumped into landfills.

But the recession stopped some people in their consumerist tracks. Enter green renters such as Leslie Gant, 27.

"I don't have the budget to get a Prius, so I use all the other little things to make a difference," said Gant, whose airy, split-level condo in L.A.'s Westwood neighborhood is filled with reused and recycled items.

Water

Water requires energy. Lots of it. Pumping it, transporting it, irrigating with it, heating it and treating it consume billions of kilowatt-hours of electricity in the U.S. each year. Producing all that power creates carbon dioxide, the equivalent of 4 million cars, according to the Natural Resources Defense Council.

So if you want to conserve energy and reduce greenhouse gases, use less water around your place.

For starters, collect your old bath water or dishwater. Known as gray water, it can be used to water houseplants or for outdoor irrigation. But you'll want to use only natural, biodegradable soap to keep from harming your greenery and to keep chemicals from leaching into the water table.

Electricity

Your 700-square-foot pad probably isn't equipped with solar panels or a wind turbine generator. But chances are your power company is generating a portion of its electricity with clean sources of energy. You can tap into those renewables—though it might cost you a little extra.

That's because clean power often costs more to generate than electricity from conventional sources such as coal or natural gas. To pay for it, some utilities are offering opt-in programs for ratepayers who wish to support clean power investments through a small surcharge on their monthly bills.

Another tactic: Find out which appliances are the biggest power consumers in your apartment with an energy audit, which public utilities usually offer free (hint: refrigerators are major energy hogs) and consider replacing them with energy-efficient models, even if your landlord won't cover the swap.

American Apparel tries to halt bleeding

L.A. Times

After American Apparel Inc. said last week that its future hangs by a thread, the hipster L.A. clothing maker and retailer was scrambling to overhaul operations, bolster sales and repair its faltering image.

In recent months, the troubled company has been beset by sales declines, losses, a crackdown on undocumented workers, problems with its debt, delayed quarterly filings and, most recently, an investigation by the U.S. attorney's office in New York related to the company's abrupt change in accounting firms.

Industry experts say the company's problems are so severe that nothing short of a major overhaul in its business practices and management, which could include a possible bankruptcy filing, can pull it out of its free fall.

And there were doubts about the future for founder Dov Charney, the company's colorful chief executive from Canada who built American Apparel into a retail powerhouse with 10,000 employees.

He also has a reputation as an outlandish personality, going so far as to appear at work in his underwear.

As the company has floundered, analysts and investors have grown increasingly concerned about Charney's business savvy and his ability to deal with the company's numerous challenges.

American Apparel is operating like "a madhouse," said Howard Davidowitz, chairman of national retail consulting and investment banking firm Davidowitz & Associates Inc.

"No one's going to leave [Charney] in control—that's over with," he said. "I think it's impossible to get anybody who's going to bet on him again."

When reached by phone last week, Charney declined to comment, referring calls to his lawyer, Peter Schey, who said there were no plans for Charney to vacate his position or leave the company.

"Neither the board nor management believes that there would be any benefit to Dov stepping aside as the CEO," Schey said. "Dov knows this business top to bottom. He understands its intricacies, its complexities and what needs to be done to get over the bumps in the road and move forward into long-term profitability."

If you know of something in social media or on the Internet that has you and your friends talking, please share it. If I use it, I'll be sure to give you the credit you deserve right here.

TWEET OF THE WEEK

@WowYou KnowIt: Facebook should have a like, love, dislike, and a nobody cares button.

All this liking is really pushing my buttons

I know it sounds ridiculous, but don't you feel Facebook is controlling what you like?

And don't you feel you don't know what you are supposed to like and dislike?

And don't you feel pressured to like something because everyone else likes it?

I don't like it.

Think about this for a second. It's almost to the point where we're liking stuff and don't even realize it. It started with Facebook pages and now we're liking the articles and Web pages we read. I just got a latte from Starbucks and my first instinct is to tell the person I'm talking to that I like it, but I'm looking for the button. It's as if liking something isn't official until I click.

And you know it's only going to get worse. Or better. See? I told you I am confused.

Soon our TVs will let us like the shows we're watching. And knowing the way the cable companies operate, we'll be forced to like a certain number of TV shows a month or we'll be charged extra.

Those comment cards that sometimes come with the check will go the way of the dinosaur. They will be replaced with a like button.

What about dating? Speed dating could be a bunch of people pressing buttons, barely flashing a smile.

Be honest. Isn't your mind totally blown right now because you never gave this any thought?

Here's another problem: There's no dislike button. And it's making us even more confused.

I was going through my Facebook feed the other day and saw a friend of mine posted that she had a cold. My first instinct was to leave a comment wishing her well, which I did. But I noticed that two people liked the post.

Wait, they liked it? As in liked the fact that she posted that she had a cold? What does that even mean? Unless they were specifically commending her for having the strength to use Facebook with her nose all stuffed up, you can't like it when someone has a cold. Unless you really hate the person. But then the person wouldn't be your friend on Facebook.

Or would they?

See what I mean? It's the line between like and dislike being blurred to the point where it's confusing, where we don't know whether we're supposed to like it or dislike it out of fear we'll be shunned by the rest of the like-happy world.

I don't like it.

Does the Facebook like button make you feel pressured? Tweet me, poke me, just tell me.

It's almost to the point where we're liking stuff and don't even realize it.

Chicago to K.C. corridor ready to roll

Chicago Tribune

Darrel McNeal spotted the new sign, mysteriously labeled "CKC" over the highway shield "Illinois 110," the other day while he was driving to work. It was posted next to the familiar Interstate 88 marker denoting the Reagan Memorial Tollway in the western suburbs.

"Neither CKC nor Illinois 110 meant anything to me. But I am a road enthusiast, so I thought about it," McNeal said. "Was it maybe a detour of some road routed onto I-88?"

Good guess, but wrong. It's a safe bet that 99.99 percent of Chicago-area drivers using I-88 or the Eisenhower Expressway (Interstate 290) probably have no idea that they are on stretches of a new national highway corridor: the 532-mile Chicago-Kansas City Expressway. In the state, it also goes by Illinois 110.

This summer marks the completion of a long struggle by some communities in downstate Illinois and neighboring Missouri to have a four-lane highway that's built to modern standards running the entire distance between Chicago and Kansas City, which is one of the larger cities for commerce and tourism in the nation's breadbasket.

The Illinois General Assembly approved a joint resolution in May designating portions of almost a dozen state routes and interstate highways in Illinois—up to the crossing of the Mississippi River at Hannibal, Mo.—as the Land of Lincoln portion of the Chicago-Kansas City Expressway.

Word is being spread to trucking associations and other fleet operators in hopes of reducing traffic congestion on the Stevenson Expressway (Interstate 55) between Chicago and Joliet and on Interstate 70 from St. Louis to Kansas City.

The Illinois State Toll Highway Authority is erecting signs designating I-88 also as being the CKC, an acronym that might take awhile to catch on here. The new signs will also go up along the Eisenhower as the ongoing expressway resurfacing project on the Ike draws closer to completion over the next several months, according to the Illinois Department of Transportation.

Former Gov. Rod Blagojevich (above) continues his image tour with a trip Saturday to Chicago Comic-Con in Rosemont. In addition to sitting in a Batmobile, Blagojevich signed autographs for $50 and took photos with fans for $80. Some attendees greeted him warmly, while others booed the former official who was convicted of making false statements.

Bail denied for two suspects in shooting death at home

On the day two men accused of murdering her husband stood before a judge in Cook County Court, Barbara Anglin stayed close to home, fearful of the wickedness she now sees in the world. "These bums have taken the love of my life. They have taken everything from me," an emotional Anglin said Sunday, hours after a Cook County circuit court Judge denied bail for Leroy Owens, 27, and Jonathan Robinson, 25, in connection with the shooting death of Anthony Anglin, 71, in a Friday morning robbery in Morgan Park.

2 men, 1 woman accused of assaulting officer

Two men and a woman from Indiana appeared in bond court Sunday after allegedly getting into a scuffle with police outside Wrigley Field on Friday afternoon. Katie Reaves, 30, her brother Joseph Reaves, 27, and Andrew Lazo, 24, each face one felony county of aggravated battery of a peace officer. Joseph Reaves allegedly struck an off-duty police officer in the back of the head. His sister later allegedly joined the fray.

Woman injured in fall onto Blue Line tracks

A 50-year-old woman in a wheelchair was taken in critical condition to a hospital Sunday afternoon after falling onto CTA Blue Line tracks, according to the Chicago Fire Department. The woman was at the Cicero Avenue stop about 1:05 p.m. when she fell from the platform and landed on the tracks, Fire Department spokesman Quention Curtis said.

Quinn signs law aimed at animal mill owners

Flanked by Eddie Spaghetti and a dozen other furry, four-legged friends, Gov. Pat Quinn on Sunday signed a law aimed at protecting consumers before they buy a dog or cat that might come from a breeding mill.

As of Jan. 1, pet stores, animal shelters and control facilities must disclose on the cages of dogs and cats the name and location of their breeders, as well as the animal's medical history.

The law is the first of its kind nationwide, said Jordan Matyas, Illinois state director of the Humane Society of the United States.

Existing state law requires sellers to disclose pet information to consumers, but the law lacks teeth and doesn't say when sellers have to provide the information, Matyas said.

Gov. Pat Quinn signs legislation Sunday to better protect pet owners from breeding mills during an event on Damen Avenue.

NANCY STONE/TRIBUNE

"This is a very important way in Illinois for us to get humane treatment of our animals," Quinn said. "We don't want anybody buying an animal that has been inhumanely treated before its sale, and unfortunately that has existed."

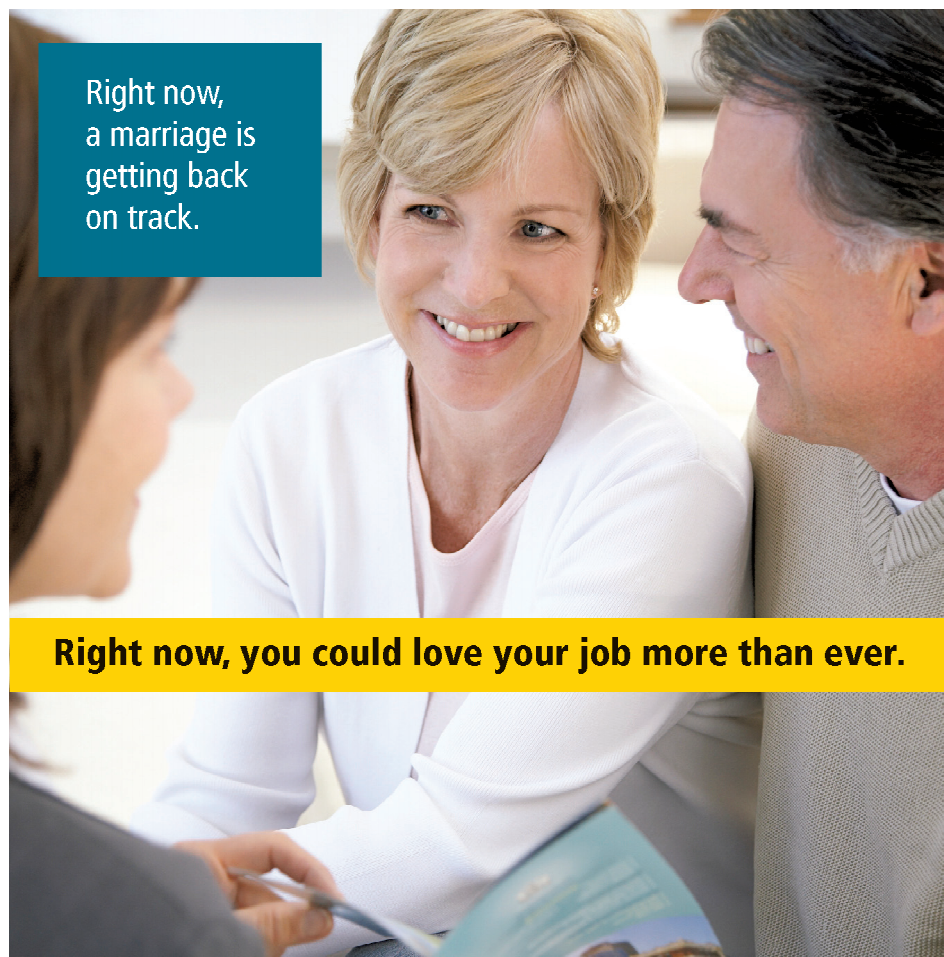

Fines for disobeying the new law can reach

$1,000 and include mandatory probation. Matyas wants consumers to fight the urge to buy an adorable puppy from a pet shop and research the dog's breeder first.

Quinn and Matyas touted the new law against the backdrop of bustling Damen Avenue in Bucktown.

From Shakespeare to Milwaukee avenues, PAWS Chicago and more than 30 other animal shelters set up shop in front of various businesses with about 250 dogs and cats ready to be adopted.

The event takes place a few times each summer, a PAWS official said.

Right now, a marriage is getting back on track.

Mariotti accused of assaulting girlfriend

1 ESPN personality and former Chicago Sun-Times sports columnist Jay Mariotti was arrested early Saturday by Los Angeles police officers on suspicion of felony domestic assault, the L.A. Times reports. Sources told the Times that an argument between Mariotti and his girlfriend escalated and Mariotti allegedly pushed and shoved the woman.

Egg recall expanded

An egg recall has expanded to include eggs sold as recently as Wednesday. The eggs have the potential to be contaminated with salmonella. The recall involves eggs distributed to 14 states, including Illinois. The egg recall brands include Hillandale Farms, Sunny Farms and Sunny Meadow, in a variety of packages.

Van Gogh painting stolen from museum

2 Egyptian authorities stopped two people suspected in the theft of a $50 million painting by Vincent Van Gogh at a museum, nabbing them just moments before they were to board a plane and flee the country, according to Egypt's official news agency, MENA. Egyptian Culture Minister Farouq Hosni said in a statement late Saturday that efforts to recover "Poppy Flowers" are continuing.

Jean to contest ineligibility ruling

3 Wyclef Jean said Sunday that he will contest a pronouncement from Haitian election officials ruling him ineligible to run for president of Haiti. "After careful consideration and much soul-searching, I have made the decision to contest Haiti's board of elections' pronouncement," Jean said in a statement.

Gunmen intercepted a vehicle carrying the salaries of Iraqi government employees in western Baghdad and made off with nearly $600,000, police officials told CNN on Sunday. The robbers attacked the vehicle a few hundred yards from a local bank, police said.

TRAPPED MINERS ALIVE

4 SANTIAGO, Chile Chilean President Sebastian Pinera jubilantly displays a note written by one of 33 miners trapped underground for 17 days. The note indicating all 33 are alive was tied to a probe sent down Sunday. The miners are believed to be in a small shelter and it will take up to four months to rescue them, officials caution. General: U.S. troops have mentoring role in Iraq

5 WASHINGTON The top American military commander in Iraq, seeking to reassure those concerned about the completed withdrawal of U.S. combat units, expressed confidence Sunday in Iraqi security forces and said the 50,000 American troops will remain in Iraq in a mentoring role with the capability of resuming battle operations if necessary.

Army Gen. Ray Odierno said it would take something like a "complete failure of the security forces" for the U.S. to step back into combat mode in Iraq.

"But we don't see that happening," he said Sunday on CNN's "State of the Union." "They've been doing so well for so long now that we really believe we're beyond that point."

His comments come amid a groundswell of worries among Iraqis and others about the stability of the country in the wake of the final pullout of U.S. combat brigades last week, especially with continued insurgent attacks and the inability by Iraqi political leaders to select a new national government after an inconclusive March election.

More than seven years after leading an invasion of Iraq, the U.S. military officially will change its function Sept. 1 to one of advising, training and assisting Iraqi forces. The number of U.S. troops in Iraq is down to 52,000, from more than 165,000 at the height of a 2007 surge. By the end of this month, that number will drop to 50,000 troops, who will remain until the end of next year.

On Sunday, a senior White House official said President Obama will deliver a major speech on Iraq after his 10-day vacation in Martha's Vineyard. Obama will discuss the withdrawal of U.S. combat forces and the administration's plans to continue the troop drawdown.

Supporters, opponents face off over mosque

6 NEW YORK With chants and banners, opponents of the planned construction of an Islamic community center and mosque near ground zero faced off Sunday with demonstrators in favor of the building.

Hundreds of critics and supporters of the proposed center in New York showed up despite an overcast and drizzly sky to express their views amid the national debate over the facility.

Opponent Mike Meehan said he would not be opposed to the center if it were built elsewhere in the city, "just not down here, please. ... It's just too close to ground zero."

Those in favor of the construction said freedom of religion was the main issue in the debate.

"There are many Muslims who lost Muslim family members at ground zero, so when they come to visit ground zero as a memorial, they should be able to walk two blocks down and pray for their loved ones," supporter Ali Akram said.

Chicago softball player, pop culture mainstay Jennie Finch hanging up her cleats

By Scott Bolohan | FOR REDEYE

Jennie Finch has been honing her craft since she was 5. Twenty-four years later, the softball superstar is calling it a career—at 29 years old.

No, that's not a typo. Finch has played softball for most of her life. On Sunday, she played her final regular-season game—and last home game—for the Chicago Bandits. It was a 4-2 loss to Tennessee, but that's beside the point.

Sunday was Finch day.

Before the game, she said that she had mixed emotions, saying she was excited but the day was bittersweet. She even seemed slightly embarrassed to call it “retirement.”

“I don't use the word retire,” Finch said. “Retire and 29 don't really go together. I like to say going on to the next step. Hopefully I have a long career ahead of me, whatever that entails.”

But whatever Finch calls it, she's hanging up her cleats as arguably the most popular softball player ever. She is as iconic to her sport as Tiger Woods is to golf or Lance Armstrong is to cycling. Unlike them, though, she has maintained a squeaky-clean off-the-field record. She is married to Houston Astros pitcher Casey Daigle and the two have a son named—what else?—Ace.

It was her desire to spend more time her family that helped her arrive at her decision, Finch said.

“I don't know if I would ever be ready for this,” she said. “I've been doing this my whole entire life so it's kind of hard to picture the next step of my life without it. My son is 4, and each summer it gets a little tougher and harder on our family, and I'd like more kids. I look forward to the next journey.”

She's won Olympic gold and silver medals, a national championship at Arizona and entered the pop culture stratosphere. ESPN named her the most attractive female athlete in 2003, and she was named one of People's 50 Most Beautiful People in 2004. She appeared on Donald Trump's “Celebrity Apprentice” in 2009, has made countless appearances on TV talk shows and graced the cover of magazines as divergent as Sports Illustrated and Modern Bride.

Even with all that non-softball attention, her teammates said Finch never wavered from her dedication to the sport and her team.

“There is a lot things that surround Jennie as a softball celebrity,” said Bandits third baseman Stacy May. “What it comes down to it she's a ballplayer. She goes about her business like a ballplayer and I'll always respect her for that.”

Catcher Rachel Folden said the attention heaped on Finch might have helped the team.

“When she's around, everyone's eyes are on her,” she said. “You can go and just play softball. I think because of that she makes us better.”

When Finch reflects on her career, she said she has a hard time believing everything she's accomplished.

“I'm extremely grateful and feel very blessed,” Finch said. “It's been just wild and beyond my wildest dreams. As an athlete, Chicago is the focal point of sports. I feel blessed to be an athlete in Chicago and call it home and see what being a Chicago athlete is all about. It's been amazing.”

But on Sunday against the Tennessee Diamonds, Finch struggled. With the stands packed at the 1,700-seat stadium at Judson University in Elgin, fans lined the rail down the first-base line to get one last look at Finch as she warmed up.

She threw two innings, scattering four hits, giving up two runs and striking out four hitters. After leading off the bottom of the second, she walked and was replaced with a pinch runner.

Finch tossed two innings for the Bandits on Sunday in their loss to Tennessee. The playoffs are up next for the Bandits.

Finch autographs posters for fans.

But she'll get a chance to end things on a better note as the Bandits qualified for the playoffs in Louisiana next week. While she would love to end her career with a National Pro Fastpitch championship, she has no regrets about stepping away from the game.

"I'm at peace with where I'm at," she said. "I hope in some way me not playing anymore will open up more opportunities for me to help the game and continue the growth of it and do more with the game not on the field, but off of it. I wouldn't know what to do if I didn't stick with it."

Although Finch may no longer be on the field for the Bandits, her days with the club are not over. She's been talking with owner Bill Sokolis about becoming a part owner of the team.

"I keep telling Bill that I've got one more week as a player and then we can talk about it," she said with a laugh.

Finch said she'll most miss the camaraderie with her teammates but is looking forward to the simple things she missed during her career.

"I'm excited for summer barbecues," Finch said. "Being able to go to family events and those kind of things I've missed out on basically my whole entire life since it's been softball, softball, softball. My husband has allowed me to continue playing for so long, so I'm excited to support him and be there for him more. I'll get to see him more and maybe make some road trips."

In the days of Brett Favre, it's hard to know if an athlete is ever really retiring for good. When asked if she, too, might pull a Favre and come back, she answered coyly.

"My teammates have been asking [whether I'll unretire]," Finch said. "I'm a softy so I don't know. But at this point I'm not planning on it. I've learned never to say never."

1 What will be Lou Piniella's favorite memory of his time with the Cubs?	Remember that postgame news conference where he pronounced someone's name right? That.	That one afternoon he got Soriano to play to his potential. I think we all shed a tiny tear.	That time they won the Worl ... um, that time they won the NL penn ... um, Ronnie Woo-Woo?	When he finally found his two kids at the end ... or was it a dream?	"Look, ah ... ah ... what do you want me to say ... ah ah. Zambrano is ... ah. What was the question again?"
2 When Piniella says he didn't think his career would "end this way," what's he saying?	He thought he'd be swept out of the first round of the playoffs again.	He's saying he's miffed he hasn't heard back on his pitch for "$#! My Manager Says."	He thought he would have had a "Sweet Lou's" BBQ sauce endorsement deal by now.	Waking up in bed to find that the Tin Man was Derrek Lee.	He's saying that Blago is more popular at Chicago Comic Con than he is with the Chicago comical Cubs.
3 Piniella and Jennie Finch's last home games were Sunday. What's that mean?	Until we see them in the same room together, they could be the same person.	Chicago has lost its foxiest, bitchiest diva of the diamond. And the Finch retirement was upsetting too.	Wait, Jennie Finch is retiring too? Does that mean she's going to focus on being hot full time now?	Jennie Finch always was a figment of Lou's imagination.	It means Lou managed the team with the worse pitching.
4 How will we know when the White Sox are out of the post-season chase?	Ozzie will be back to complaining about how the Cubs get more coverage in the media.	Hate to say it, but I think we know. (Tiny tear encore.)	Take it from a Sox lifer, you don't know who wins the Central until the playoffs start. No clue beforehand.	Ozzie steps out from behind the curtain to give Freddie Garcia some courage.	Hawk yells "don't stop now boys" and even Ozzie yells back "shut the #$% up!"
5 The Bears looked _____ against Oakland on Saturday night.	... like 2009 all over again "Real-Housewives-of-DC-at-Jeopardy-tryouts slow" like a 7-9 team ... I like Dan LeFevour though, if only for the built-in nickname.	... like a movie with an unlikely ending like bullfighters ... "Ole!" says the offensive line.

ATLANTA 16, CUBS 5

Double Cubs loss

Before he could leave town, the Cubs presented Lou Piniella with one last reminder of his final season, just for old time's sake.

The Cubs gave him one of those innings in Sunday's 16-5 loss to Atlanta—coincidentally, the same result as opening day in Atlanta—that made his final, shortened season so extra-frustrating.

"It's a good day to remember," Piniella said afterward, "and also a good day to forget."

The inning was the five-run eighth when four pitchers combined to allow five runs on four hits, a walk, a hit batter, a wild pitch, a ground ball that couldn't be fielded and a pop-up that fell between two fielders. In other words, more of what Piniella has been watching all season.

"The game wasn't pretty," Piniella said. "I would rather reflect on the good times I've had here. There have been a lot of good times, a lot of good people, it's been a lot of fun."

Piniella said he was "very appreciative, very moved, very touched" by several ovations from the Wrigley Field crowd of 37,518.

"This is the final final," he said of his postgame news conference.

Piniella, who had expected to manage the team through the end of the season, is leaving for family reasons.

Cubs manager Lou Piniella sits teary-eyed in the dugout after his retirement was announced before the start of Sunday's game against Atlanta at Wrigley Field. The Braves beat the Cubs 16-5.

Play it smart with these Grade A food, drink classes

By Rebecca Palmore and Lisa Balde

As sunblock and flip-flops give way to backpacks and No. 2 pencils, echoes of childhood anxiety re-surface in three simple words: summer is ending. The good news? Back-to-school season means we can play student in fun subjects for short periods of time. Here are some of our favorite options. Don't forget to reserve a spot early, because classes typically fill up in advance. Can't make the date? All spots offer multiple classes throughout the year.

Epic Table

Epic, 112 W. Hubbard St. 312-222-4940

Class: In the second of Epic's new monthly dine-and-learn series, executive chef Stephen Wambach focuses on an unlikely ingredient: octopus. Learn how to prep, cook and plate it during a 25-minute kitchen demo, then dig into a communal lunch with wine. Noon Sept. 16, $29.

Chef's tip: "You can never get it right on the first chance, so the best thing to do is research as much as possible before you make an attempt at a difficult recipe at home," Wambach says.

Late Summer Harvest

The Wooden Spoon, 5047 N. Clark St. 773-293-3190

Class: Market-fresh produce, such as corn and tomatoes, is the star of this hands-on class led by chef Rebecca Walker. Learn how to make dishes such as sweet corn chowder and grilled skirt steak with spicy herb salsa verde. Includes generous samples of each dish; BYOB welcome. 6:30 p.m. Sept. 1, $65.

Chef's tip: "Think simple," Walker emphasizes. Good, in-season ingredients can shine on their own and don't need a lot of dressing up.

School of Lush

Lush Wine & Spirits, 1412 W. Chicago Ave. 312-666-6900

Class: Sherry who? Smarten up your liquor lingo with this class on vinos de jerez (that's sherry, folks), led by Lush managers Jane Lopes and Rachel Driver, who say sherry probably is the most misunderstood and mind-blowing style of wine. Includes about 10 sherries, plus food pairings and some handouts for at-home study. 6:30 p.m. Thursday, $35.

Chef's tip: Lopes says sherry is going to be the next big thing in food pairing because of its versatility.

The Boozehound Presents: Rum

Drinks Over Dearborn, 650 N. Dearborn St. 312-337-9463

Class: Expand your rum chops beyond 2-liter Coke bottles at this tasting led by owner Kyle McHugh. Get a condensed history of the sugar-based liquor and learn how to choose and taste the stuff. Sample several kinds and take home a tip sheet. 6:30 p.m. Thursday, $25.

Chef's tip: No need to spend beaucoup bucks on a decent bottle of rum. "Sugar is cheap, so an aged rum is equally good a sipper as one half the price," McHugh says.

Heartland 101

Markethouse, 611 N. Fairbanks Ct. 312-224-2200

Class: Focused on fresh, local ingredients (some taken from Markethouse's rooftop garden), this class is part demo, part tasting dinner. Sample five courses while chef Scott Walton (right) runs down cooking techniques and demos recipes for Illinois sweet corn soup (first course) and buttermilk panna cotta with wild berries (fifth course). Includes wine pairings. 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, $45.

Chef's tip: When making sweet corn soup, don't toss the cob; save it for soup stock.

Italian cooking

A Tavola, 2148 W. Chicago Ave. 773-276-7567

Class: By the end of this nearly three-hour, hands-on lesson, you'll have the skills to make a classic Italian, four-course dinner of marinated portabella mushrooms, gnocchi, oven-roasted chicken and a baked apple tart. Post-lesson, taste your efforts at dinner with chef Daniel Bocik. 6:30 p.m. Sept. 20, $50 per person.

Chef's tip: There are two tricks to Italian cooking, Bocik says: learning how to make the food taste good and knowing when it's done.

Al Piemonte Ford Makes Getting Approved Easier Than Ever

Al Piemonte Ford located at the corner of North Avenue and 25th Avenue has had a 45 year reputation as a leading car dealership with good credit resources. Now they plan on expanding this department to help customers get the auto credit that they deserve.

For years, Ed Dixon, has been called "The Credit Coach" because of his skill at getting approval for customers who were credit challenged. This year alone Ed will help hundreds of additional Chicago area families get the cars they need.

Cash for Cars" Announced at Melrose Park Dealership

In an effort to greatly increase the number of used cars they have to offer, Al Piemonte Ford is making an open call to Chicago area car owners to bring in their vehicles for a professional appraisal.

"We are very interested in acquiring pre-owned cars and we've set aside several hundred thousand dollars to buy them. Most people don't realize what their cars are actually worth. Many are sitting on a gold mine and they don't even know it."

Advance appointments are encouraged so that waiting is kept to a minimum. Call 1-708-345-9300 to schedule a free, no obligation appraisal. Everyone who brings their car in for an appraisal will receive a free $5. Target gift card just for giving us the opportunity to make an offer.

Lower Back Pain?

Are You or Someone You Know Suffering From Lower Back Pain?

Northwestern University is seeking volunteers who have lower back pain in order to determine where the pain is recognized in the brain. Participants will also be evaluated to determine why pain goes away for some people while it remains for others. This is a 12 month study consisting of 1 visit at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago and 5 MRI scans at Northwestern Memorial Hospital's Olson Pavilion. All visits will take place in downtown Chicago.

Eligible participants must:

- Be 18 years or older
- Have a history of lower back pain which began 4-16 weeks ago with pain radiating into the buttocks or legs
- Be able to undergo a MRI (no pacemakers, metallic implants, or spinal implants)

Please call 312-503-3181 for more information on how you can take part in this research study.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! Virgo

Aug. 23-Sept. 22
As the sun moves into your sign, you're feeling relatively optimistic. Your boyfriend is in jail, but he'll be out in a few weeks. And your girlfriend has decided to move back in with her parents, but you're sure she'll invite you over at some point.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

You'll find it easy to get what you want as Venus waves her magic wand at you. If you've been hoping to seduce a gorgeous guy, you'll get lucky. If you've been longing for your ex-girlfriend to call you up, expect your phone to ring.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

A funky moon has you wondering what you want to be when you grow up. Too bad you're 50 and still haven't figured that out. Lunar energies are inspiring you to try something new and hang out with different types of people. Follow those instincts.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

You'll receive loads of applause this week as Jupiter continues to shine the spotlight on you. You'll receive praise for a presentation and might even get a raise. Don't let your lover's whiny moods ruin your special moment.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Let go of that guilt about past indiscretions. So you cheated on your junior-high boyfriend. Who didn't? So you asked your college girlfriend to marry you and remained engaged for four years without getting hitched. Pluto says these things happen.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You're in a whimsical mood, thanks to Venus. You'll want to indulge in some role-playing. A lusty round of "Sarah Palin Chasing the Big Moose" might be fun. Or you could get out your water guns and pretend to be Brad and Angelina in "Mr. and Mrs. Smith."

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

The full moon in your sign is intensifying your sexual longing. Even if you're making love six times a day, something is missing. Maybe it's not about satisfying bodily urges. It could be about needing to find fulfillment on a spiritual or emotional level.

Aries March 21-April 19

You could be attracted to someone who is bigger, bolder and weirder than you. Jupiter is creating sexual tension with an odd but intriguing new friend. If you embark upon a relationship, prepare for a bumpy ride.

Taurus April 20-May 20

A flirty friend from the old days is likely to look you up, courtesy of Mercury. You'll be surprised at how the two of you still share some hot chemistry. Will you enter a Phase 2 of your friendship? Or will you play it safe and just say "no?"

Gemini May 21-June 21

Air signs such as you are easily bored. You're always cooking up lusty episodes with new friends even if you're already in a long-term relationship. This week, that behavior could backfire on you, thanks to truth-telling Venus.

Cancer June 22-July 22

A dreamy moon is turning you into a space cadet. You'll forget to meet your girlfriend for lunch or neglect to walk your neighbor's dog, even though you promised to do so while he or she was away. Don't piss people off too much, OK?

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Finally, things are going your way. That hot guy you've been drooling over finally will notice that a) you're alive and b) you're kinda cute. Or that newly single female friend will ask you out. Jupiter is increasing your sexual mojo.

Emmys get creative

WATCH IT

NBC will air the Primetime Emmy Awards live at 6 p.m. Sunday.

Betty White, Neil Patrick Harris and the sexy Old Spice Guy took home Creative Arts Emmys on Saturday night, a little more than a week before the big dance.

White won for her triumphant job hosting "Saturday Night Live" and Harris scored for his comedy guest role on "Glee" and for hosting the Tony Awards. John Lithgow won on the dramatic side for his guest star turn on last season's "Dexter," while Ann-Margret took home an award for her guest role on "Law & Order: SVU." HBO's fantastic miniseries "The Pacific" won seven awards, a nice honor considering many of the great performances were overlooked by Emmy voters.

After the ceremony, even more women likely will want their men to be like Isaiah Mustafa; his popular Old Spice commercial was a winner as well.

Kathy Griffin of "My Life on the D-List" was typically apoplectic after her loss in the reality show category to "Jamie Oliver's Food Revolution," which was produced by the ubiquitous Ryan Seacrest. "Call the paramedics!" Griffin tweeted upon losing, according to the L.A. Times. "I'm putting myself on a 5150 psych hold (a la Britney) 72 hours in a padded cell, far, far away from @RyanSeacrest." Imagine her reaction if "Antiques Roadshow" had won.

Jeff Probst won his third straight Emmy for guiding the contestants on "Survivor" and Anne Hathaway became the latest star to get an Emmy for lending a voice to "The Simpsons." Jimmy Fallon, who will host this year's Emmys, got a trophy for the "Late Night" website, online.com reported.

Two quibbles among the winners: Not to rain on the parade of the creative types working on "CSI," but the CBS drama in no way should have walked away with Emmys for best cinematography and best visual effects. Those winners should have been "Breaking Bad," the best filmed drama on TV, and the amazing visual effects of Syfy's "Stargate Universe."

No word on whether it was a blood oath, but Anna Paquin and Stephen Moyer (right) are legally wed. The "True Blood" stars made it official Saturday, tying the knot in front of family and friends in Malibu, Calif., according to usmagazine.com. Elijah Wood, "Blood" co-star Carrie Preston and her husband, Michael Emerson of "Lost," were among the guests.

What's the buzz?

Maggie Gyllenhaal's (left) new role is rather masturbatory. She has signed on for a romantic comedy called "Hysteria" about the invention of the vibrator, Variety reports. The Victorian-era movie will star Gyllenhaal as the daughter of a doctor who, along with his young colleague (Hugh Dancy) treats cases of female hysteria with a new electrical device.

Sin City offer for Madonna?

Madonna in Las Vegas—sounds awesome. According to MTV UK, Caesar's Palace is willing to pay up to a BILLION dollars to land the Madge for a five-year residency—similar to the deals they cut with Celine Dion and Cher. There is no official response from Madonna's camp.

'Housewives' banned

The entire "Real Housewives of New Jersey" cast and crew have been banned from the New Jersey Country Club in Wayne, N.J., following the infamous brawl that left one woman without some of her hair extensions. "We are all embarrassed with the staged behavior of these cast members at our club," club official John Stanley wrote in a letter to members. "I assure you that nothing like this will ever occur again at this club."

No stopping Gaga

Britney Spears' reign as Twitter queen has come to an end. Nearly three months after Brit swiped the Twitter crown from Ashton Kutcher, Lady Gaga (right) has overtaken her. On Saturday, Gaga surged into the lead with 5,694,147 followers to Spears' 5,685,390, "Access Hollywood" reports.
